culture and aesthetics...

A mosaic is a piece of art and was created by assembling small pieces of coloured marble to create an image on floors or walls. Popular as an art form during the Roman Empire, mosaics reached the pinnacle of craftsmanship, with their intricate designs, delicate handcrafted images, colour combinations and ability to reflect light. The chosen colour and materials often reflected the owner's personal taste as well as status in society. Mosaics are still very popular in today's houses for both indoor and outdoor living areas - giving the space a unique creative character.
